" We feel greater satisfaction in the Mecklenburg celebration than in Lexington, Concord, and Ticonderega because it has taken place in the South, and is a conspicuous proof that the recent civil war has not quenched nor abated the patriotic spirit or that section of the country. The glorious memories of the Revolution are the strongest bond of union between the North and the South, and we fervently rejoice at the proof given yesterday that the emulous patriotism of Carolina, founded on Revolutionary memories, is not inferior to that of Massachusetts. How trivial is the recent controversy respecting dates and documents in comparison dimmed the fires of patriotism !"

All seem to put a right estimate upon the intelligent and patriotic enthusiasm of our North Carolina friends. A correspondent of this paper, writing from Charlotte, expressed dissent from some of the sentiments of the Hon. John Kenn, the orator of the day-not so much because he differed with the orator in his sentiments as because they were decmed by him indiscreet. We are not responsible for the opinions of correspondents. but in regard to these we take occasion to say that we do not agree with the criticism upon the oration. We see nothing in it to censure or to regard as inappropriate. The incidental expression of feeling with regard to our own cause and people surely none can censure, while Mr. Kere's fine "curl" about the stars and stripes was quite enough to excite to jubilation any northern lover of the Union. It came near throwing Francis RODMAN DRAKE in the shade. You know be tore the "azure" of the flag from the beavens; likewise the stars-achievements that sanctified the flag and immortalized the poet. But the graceful North State orator was not Federal enthusiasm in the oration that we think it ought to have met with universal applatise north of Mason and Dixon.

Improve and Beautify the Boundaries. It is quite rare to find a city with a maritime commerce so finely conditioned for picthresque landscapes and river scenes as Richmond. We should always bear this in mind; and, remembering how much the agreeable surroundings of a city have to do with the influences which go to invite population and make people healthy and contented, we should cherish all the fine points in degree of interest we have in the question, the local topography and do our best to make them available to public gratifica- not!"

We especially direct attention to the near locality of the port at Rocketts and the overlooking hills. It is exceedingly desirable that these places should not be allowed to wear the face of neglect and slovenliness. Vice and vagabondism find their most congenial haunts in the regions of decay and squalid wretchedness-in what seem to be placed beyond the pale of decency by neglect-in what seem to be outlawed by the withdrawal from them of all orderly people. Such precincts should not be permitted anywhere, and least of all in places topographically prominent and susceptible of being made ornamental.

The idea that vice seeks forbidding placesthose that are abandoned by neglect, and those that are least within the pale of decency and order-is illustrated in our everyday experience. The celebrated Blackfriars of London was at one time the exclusive bount of outlaws and lewd persons. The officers of the law halted at the outer boundaries, and the inhabitants were left to do as they pleased. Gas was invented and the Blackfriars was illumined, and from that time it was brought under subjection to the police, and was lawless Blackfriars no more. So a neglected and slovenly district, when policed, grows steadily in good behavior and respectability. The lily and the rose become the guardian geniuses of decorum and gentleness, and men are taught the blessings of nature; and the charming earth we inhabit may be made to minister to the delight and peace of all without diminishing the real happiness of any. In this way the work of civilization performs some of its brightest achievements. The public authorities should take under their eare just such points as we have referred to, and should by no means permit them to become the fortifications of squalor and decay. The good appearance of the city involves its good reputation; and that has a great deal to do with its success.

We have to repeat what we have before said: that no part of this city more needs the attention of the city authorities in reference to these views than the hills overlooking the shipping port of Richmond. We do trust that the proper attention may be directed to them, and that the public character-the Three Feathers. A Novel. By WILLIAM general credit for good taste, decorum, and at least a civil amount of liberality-may not continue to suffer by the abominable appearance of that part of the city.

SPOTTED TAIL NOT A DIPLOMAT .- The civilities in Washington between the Great Father and several chiefs among his red sons baye not, our readers know, been so very kind as they should be. The "Great Father" has offended his red sons much by clude his life from an early age to the pretold them that he knew what was good for them better than they themselves did. He told them to see the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner for Indian Affairs, and if they could not agree with them, come to him afterwards and he would try to settle their affairs. This aroused "Spotted Tail," Not diplomatic, but true and good.

A SIGN NOT WITHOUT ENCOURAGEMENT.-The financial report read Saturday in the Episcopal Council, in session in this city, stated that the amount collected by the Episcopal Church in this State during the last year exceeded the sum collected the previous year was due to some improvement in the financial condition of the State.

GENERAL GRANT is announced as about to book may be drawn out by it. start for Long Branch. He goes on the 3d or 4th of June. We wish General GRANT would go to some other place besides Long Branch. It would give variety to the announcements about him, if it did not give variety to his own summer life.

The Summer Term. The seasons thus far have rather "knocked ? the weatherwise, and there has been so much caprice in the spring season that the wonder is how "Old Probabilities" has kept up with it. But it is just to him to say that he seems to improve with experience, and is seldom caught napping by the wily cheat-the fickle season. He has marked down all her changes with surprising accu-

At last it would seem that summer is about come. We have parted finally from cold snaps, and may now proceed confidently towards putting everything upon a summer basis. The springs people are as busy as will open on MONDAY MORNING, MAY 24TH, a bees, and soon the gay butterflies of summer will commence their flirtations around the place of pleasure.

Our peaches, and cherries, and apricots were all killed, and we have ceased mourning for them; but the strawberries renewed their blooms in a great many gardens, and in a few days we shall, we understand, have a good supply of unusually fine berries. This will be delightful.

Peaches promise an abundant crop north of the lower line of Pennsylvania and south with this proof that our civil war has not of North Carolina. Man and Beast, Here and Hereafter. I lustrated by more than Three Hundred Aneccotes. By the Rev. J. G. Wood, M. A., F. L. S. Author of "Homes Without Hands," &c. New York: HARPER &

The reverend author of this curious work a believer in the immortality of the lower anim is. He tells a great many entertaining ancedores to show remarkable intelligence in these lower animals and to inculcate a kindly far behind him. Indeed, there was such good feeling towards his theory. He states many objections that have been made to it, and gives his answers to them. It may serve to while away an hour in a pleasart manner to investigate the speculations of our amiable author; but we suppose few have yet thought as earnestly as he has about all created beings living in heaven; nor will his readers likely be pleased with the notion that even the insects are to have an immortality with man, that they "may continue in the world of spirits the "work which they begun in the world of "matter." The Work of God in Great Britain under Mesers. Moody and Sankey, 1873 to 1875, with Biographical Sketches. By Rufus W. CLARKE, D. D. "Not by might nor wer, but by my spirit, saith the Lord bests."- Z ch. iv, 6. New York: HARPER & BROTHERS.

Here we have a book about the doings of the much-talked-of exhorters. We do not gather from it what communions they belong to. Dwight L. Moody was born in Northfield, Mass., in '37; so he is only thirty- pestry, Torce-Ply. Ingrain, Hemp, and Venetian. eight years old. IRA D. SANKEY Was born in Edinburgh, Penn., in 1840, and is therefore only thirty-five. The two met in Chieago (which from all accounts was a fine field for their operations) and allied themselves with the Young Men's Christian Association there. In that town a distinguished Scotch Presbyterian preacher met Mr. Moody, and after hearing him wrote home that he was the "lightning Christian ' of the "lightning city." He and his col league seem to have waked up people somewhat out in the virtuous city of Chicago; but in Lordon have they achieved their greatest fome, as the public baye learned from the statements of the press in that city. Through the invitations of a number of English clergymen they crossed the water, and they have had an exciting and, as reports say, successful time there. They have been well united in their labors since they formed their alliance in Chicago. This book sketches their career and embodies their enthusiastic
